NEW SERIES-VOL, V.-NO. 35. GENS. CROOK AND KELLY WERE CAPTURED.

[From the Richmond Enquirer, Feb, 27] The Yankee generals Crook and Kelley, and the adjutant general of the former, Thayer Melvin, arrived in Richmond yesterday morning at two o'clock by the Central cars. As previously stated, these officers were captured in Cumberland, Maryland, on Tuesday last by Liutenant McNeill and thirty men. From one of the party engaged in this dashing and brilliant enterprise we learn the following incidents of the capture: The party crossed the Potomac in front of the town at a late hour on the night of the event, and capturing the only sentinel to be seen, induced him to divulge the countersign. The main body of the detachment was then posted in a convenient position, and the Lieutenant commanding, with several of the men, boldly rode into the town, woman is not only a sacred claim to the which was garrisoned by over four hundred Federal troops. The headquatters of General Crook were at one hotel, and those of Gene al Kelly at another, and their locations, being duly made known by the captured sentinel, the daring partisans made their way to those of the form er, arriving just in front of which the Lieutenant halied and inquired of the government too stoop to such means of sentinel if the general was in. Receiving an affirmative reply, he said he had important despatches for him, and dismount can this be the nineteenth century? ing, followed by his men, advanced to the scutinel, gave the countersign, and pass-citizen would come, to attend to his pried in.
